PBS breathes new life into Louisa May Alcott's 'Little Women'

By K.A. Taylor
TV Media

A brief channel surf quickly reveals that women on television are still all too often depicted as jealous, fighting frenemies. Often generic and one-dimensional, these portrayals detrimentally serve to convince the world — and more importantly, young women — that to be feminine is to lack rationality and depth.

Fortunately for anyone looking for a more uplifting depiction of young womanhood, PBS has teamed up with the BBC to bring to life a new miniseries adaptation of Louisa May Alcott's classic novel "Little Women." How fascinating it is to consider that a series based on a 150-year-old novel could deliver a more honest and complex representation of women's relationships than we see in so much modern-day fare. The latest "Masterpiece Classic" offering, "Little Women" premieres Sunday, May 13, on PBS.

"Little Women" stays loyal to Alcott's work, while interjecting ample doses of humor and empowerment. Set amidst the American Civil War, the story provides a glimpse into the lives of the four March sisters as they grow from girls to young women under the watchful, loving care of their mother. The family, once well-to-do, now lives in poverty. Relocated to a new portion of a Massachusetts community, these little women find themselves not just penniless but also fatherless, as the patriarch has been called off to war. Left to fend for themselves, the March women are eager to prove that they're more than capable of doing so.

Each sister is undeniably a March, yet entirely unique. Meg March (Willa Fitzgerald, "Scream: The TV Series") is the eldest of the four and quite naturally adapts to a matriarchal type of role, quite satisfied with the prospect of a domestic life. Second eldest, Jo (Maya Hawke, "Ladyworld," 2018), is full of bold ambition, often labeled a tomboy due to her interests and hopes to be a published writer one day. Beth (Annes Elwy, "Philip K. Dick's Electric Dreams"), the third daughter, is quite shy and has a penchant for music. The youngest March, Amy (Kathryn Newton, "Lady Bird," 2017), is the most artistic, though easily swayed into a state of vanity.

Initially, these four girls may seem fairly set in their ways, somewhat stereotypical and quite contrary to one another. As the girls develop, however, it becomes clear that there are multiple dimensions to all of their personalities, and assumed predictability is quickly discarded.

The casting of "Little Women's" leading ladies in this latest adaptation blends fresh, new faces with a healthy dose of well-established talent. If newcomer Hawke seems familiar, it may be in large part due to the success of her parents. The actress is the daughter of Uma Thurman ("Kill Bill: Vol. 1," 2003) and Ethan Hawke ("Training Day," 2001), two beloved actors whose passion for the craft seems to be hereditary.

Hawke has a lot of hopes for this interpretation of Jo, which she expressed during a news release interview for "Masterpiece." She longs for audiences to notice Jo's imperfections and notes that she did her best to express "the parts of [Jo] that she would feel insecure about" and to "illuminate her less perfect qualities," trying to stray from the perfectionist persona for which the character is typically known.

The two elder March ladies of the miniseries are portrayed by theatrical and cinematic favorites. Matriarch Marmee is played by the acclaimed Emily Watson ("The Book Thief," 2013), who began her career heavily invested in feature film roles, but who has been racking up more and more TV series parts since 2011. Surpassing all of these talented ladies, however, is the legendary Angela Lansbury ("Murder She Wrote"), who steps into the fiercely critical shoes of Aunt March.

Since 1868, when "Little Women" was published, the story has endured countless adaptations in various formats. Be it film, television, musicals, operas, stage plays, web videos or audio dramas, it's clear that the authenticity felt in this novel translates well to all mediums. The story was first adapted for the silver screen in silent format in 1917, with the most recent big-screen adaptation currently in production. When it comes to television, BBC has developed four miniseries of "Little Women," the first airing in the 1950s as a live production. Anyone with siblings, but especially those of us who are sisters and have sisters, find deep familiarity with the relationships and conflicts depicted, so it's no surprise that Alcott's work continues to remain relevant and reproduced.

Driven by authenticity and truth to the period within which the tale is set, "Little Women" promises to be a well-loved representation of the classic novel. The cast, crew and director have painstakingly worked to recreate Alcott's world, placing emphasis on natural beauty and individuality over spectacle. In a promotional interview for the miniseries, director Vanessa Caswill expressed how important it was to "[tell] a truthful story" — one that would "empower the women in it by not making them dollies, by making them just pure and beautiful."

With women continuing to push for their unique voices and stories to be heard, perhaps there is no better time than now for a retelling of Alcott's beloved novel. Embrace feminine strength and growth when "Little Women" premieres Sunday, May 13, on PBS.

Black Panther

Isolated and hidden from the world for centuries, the nation of Wakanda has grown rich and technologically advanced, thanks to its deposits of vibranium, an incredibly rare metal. After his father's death, T'Challa (Boseman) returns to Wakanda to take the throne and keep the kingdom united as Black Panther, a hero given supernatural strength by a mysterious heart-shaped herb and a suit made of vibranium. However, when an exiled Wakandan named Killmonger (Jordan) arrives on the scene with a message of revolution, Wakanda's future — and that of the entire world — hangs in the balance.

Director: Ryan Coogler. Stars: Chadwick Boseman, Michael B. Jordan, Lupita Nyong'o, Danai Gurira, Letitia Wright, Daniel Kaluuya, Martin Freeman. 2018. 134 min. Action.

The most common types of viral hepatitis are hepatitis A, hepatitis B, and hepatitis C. While each can produce similar symptoms, each hepatitis virus affects the liver differently, has different routes of transmission, and has different populations that are commonly affected.

HEPATITIS A
Hepatitis A is a highly contagious liver infection that can range from a mild illness lasting a few weeks to a severe illness lasting several months. The hepatitis A virus is usually spread when a person ingests the virus from contact with objects, food, or drinks contaminated by feces or stool from an infected person. The importance of always washing hands thoroughly after using the restroom and when you come in contact with an infected person's blood, stools, or other bodily fluid is the main key to prevention.

HEPATITIS B
Hepatitis B is a liver disease that results from infection with the hepatitis B virus. For some people, especially those infected as infants, the infection leads to a chronic or lifelong illness. The hepatitis B virus is spread primarily when blood, semen, or certain other body fluids from a person infected enters the body of someone who is not infected. The virus can be spread through sexual transmission and through contact with blood, such as sharing injection drug equipment. As a result the hepatitis B vaccine is recommended for all infants at birth and anyone else at increased risk.

HEPATITIS C
Hepatitis C is a liver disease that results from infection with the hepatitis C virus. Most people who become infected with the virus go on to develop a chronic infection that causes serious liver problems. The hepatitis C virus is usually spread when blood from a person infected enters the body of someone who is not infected. Today, most people become infected with hepatitis C by sharing needles, syringes, or any other equipment to inject drugs. In fact, rates of new infections have been on the rise in young people who inject drugs in recent years. While rare, hepatitis C can be transmitted sexually, as well as from an infected women to her baby.

Saturday Best Bets

Jenna Wolfe and Lester Holt in "Today"

Saturday Today

18 7:00 AM 5 8:00 AM
Weekend anchors Lester Holt, Jenna Wolfe, Dylan Dreyer and Erica Hill present breaking news, interviews and more. The weekend edition of the program features live interaction with the crowd outside the windowed studio in Rockefeller Plaza.

Ransom

27 12 8:00 PM
When dangerous criminals ask for ransom, Eric Beaumont (Luke Roberts) and his team race to save lives in this new episode. He relies on the expertise of psych-profiler Oliver Yates (Brandon Jay McLaren) and ex-cop Zara Hallam (Nazneen Contractor).

The Zoo

ANPL 9:00 PM
When surgeons perform a procedure on a silverback gorilla's broken canine, they uncover a more serious medical issue in this new episode. Elsewhere, keepers think love is in the air for birds of paradise Glory and Holiday.

Nate & Jeremiah By Design

tlc 9:05 PM
In this new episode, Nate and Jeremiah work to transform The Covenant House, a youth homeless shelter in Hollywood. While most of the facility is modern in design, the Big Room could use a refresh, so residents seek their help.

Stars On Screen

HBO brings a literary classic to the screen

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

The heat is on: In an era when fake news, social media scandals and cries of censorship fill the landscape, it's a good time to remember that concerns about censorship and the ways that information is spread are far from new, with some of the 20th century's most-recognized novels dealing with the subject. 1953's "Fahrenheit 451" by Ray Bradbury is one of the best known, and now the book is getting the HBO treatment.

"Fahrenheit 451" premieres Saturday, May 19, on HBO, with an all-star cast bringing the novel to life in a gorgeous film that's just as relevant today as the book was back in 1953.

Michael B. Jordan ("Black Panther," 2018) headlines the cast as Montag, a fireman in a not-so-distant dystopian future. In this future version of America, the role of firemen has changed, though. They don't fight fires; they start them. In a world where books have become contraband and people get their entertainment from other sources, the firemen are responsible for burning any books that are found — along with the buildings in which they're discovered.

Michael Shannon ("The Shape of Water," 2017) plays Montag's superior and mentor, Beatty, who becomes suspicious after Montag begins smuggling books out of the homes that they burn so that he can read them, while Sofia Boutella ("Kingsman: The Secret Service," 2014) stars as an informant who finds herself tugged between the two men.

Back for more: They say that all good things must come to an end, but that old idiom apparently doesn't apply to "NCIS." The CBS drama has been a mainstay at the network for a whopping 15 seasons, and with a recent 16th-season pickup, it seems that the procedural still has lots of life in it.

That's not the only good news for all the "NCIS" fans out there. Mark Harmon ("Chicago Hope"), who's headlined the cast since the very first season, has reportedly inked a new contract to stay on for the new season as well.

"It's pretty simple — viewers everywhere love 'NCIS,'" CBS Entertainment president Kelly Kahl said in a statement announcing the renewal. "This show speaks to viewers of all ages, in all parts of the country and around the world. 'NCIS's' amazing characters and terrific storytelling result in some of TV's most passionate fans."

Sadly for fans, there's at least one face that won't be on screen when the 16th season arrives. Pauley Perrette ("Almost Famous," 2000), who's starred alongside Harmon since the very beginning, has hung up her hat and moved on from the series. Despite that, the show must go on, as they say.

Growing up: The Goldberg family is growing. ABC's popular 1980s-set sitcom now has five seasons under its belt and a sixth on the way, and with an unnamed spinoff finally ordered to series, it looks like the underlying humor in "The Goldbergs" isn't going anywhere for a while.

The new series, which is slated to premiere sometime in the 2018-19 TV season, will jump ahead a few years from its parent series and be set in the 1990s. The focus of the spinoff will be squarely on the teachers at William Penn Academy. The pickup is actually the spinoff's second chance at life, after ABC went so far as to order a pilot over a year ago, only to decline a full series order on the show.

Well, "Goldbergs" fans don't have to worry about that this time, with a full 13 episodes on order. Among the new cast is former "The Goldbergs" star AJ Michalka, who played Lainey for four seasons before leaving ahead of the fifth season. She'll be jumping right back into the same role, only now as a teacher at William Penn Academy.

Recurring "Goldbergs" guest stars Tim Meadows and Bryan Callen will also reprise their roles, with Meadows now toplining as Principal Glascott and Callen as Coach Mellor. Despite their unique eccentricities and personal lives, all three characters are looked up to by their students.

New judge incoming in the latest season of 'Chopped'

Host Ted Allen with the "Chopped" judges

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

You can say this about "Chopped": it has a formula that works and it's stuck with it for a long time. It makes perfect sense. After all, if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Of course, the super popular cooking competition show hasn't remained static for all these years. Since premiering way back in 2009, it's had a few nips, tucks and tweaks, and the Tuesday evening Food Network series has another little tweak coming up: a new judge with a very big name. Although the series has always had a stable of rotating judges (with guests frequently mixed in for variety), including chefs Alex Guarnaschelli, Marc Murphy, Chris Santos, Marcus Samuelsson and Amana Freitag, it's never had the likes of Martha Stewart before, who joins as a recurring guest judge in the Tuesday, June 5, episode.

Before then, though, there's still lots of classic "Chopped" fun to be had. In this week's episode, airing Tuesday, May 15, host Ted Allen ("Queer Eye for the Straight Guy") reveals some intriguing mystery ingredients in the baskets — ingredients that, as always, the competing chefs must feature in their dishes.

The first round's basket includes beautiful plums alongside a classic Asian food, but in an innovative form. For the entrée round, the baskets contain a cut of meat that's notoriously tough and a somewhat unusual mayonnaise-based product. When it comes time for dessert, the remaining contestants find a sugary breakfast cereal item that's sure to surprise.

So what is it about "Chopped" that's made it so appealing for so long? Perhaps it's just the simplicity of it all. Barring the occasional special episode, it's just four professionals doing what they do best: cooking. They're all given the same four mystery ingredients, which run the gamut from super common to super bizarre. Their time is limited, but outside of that, it's just pure cooking competition while the host and judges look on and pass commentary.

"Chopped" has always been good fun, and it's showing no signs of slowing down, with Martha Stewart joining as a recurring judge next month. The latest season airs Tuesday evenings on Food Network.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison

TV Media

Q: Has "Too Close to Home" been canceled? The cliffhanger at the end of last season left me expecting more.

A: The idea of the cliffhanger is to make viewers want to return to a show even after it's been off the air for months during the off-season. But there's a bit of cruelty to this model, because usually writers don't know if they'll get another season when they're writing. They hang you out on the cliff intentionally, with the hope they'll be allowed to rescue you in six or seven months.

That extended explanation is my way of letting you down easy, before telling you that the "Too Close to Home" writers weren't allowed to rescue you from the cliff: the show's been canceled.

I won't go into the details in case people are still catching up, but there was a dramatic pregnancy revelation at the end of the second season and ongoing strife between the first lady of the United States (played by Heather Locklear) and the disgraced former White House staffer exiled to her home state of Alabama. None of these plots will be resolved now that the show's been canceled by TLC.

The cancellation left a significant hole in creator/producer/writer/director Tyler Perry's schedule, because, as star Danielle Savre told "Entertainment Tonight," he was very "hands-on" with the show.

Q: Are there any laws or rules around using the words "based on a true story"? Is there a certain amount of truth that has to be incorporated in order to use that teaser?

A: The only rule regarding saying something's "based on a true story" is the old rule about not getting caught.

If there are people alive who can say with certainty that a film or show's account is not true in some legally actionable way — if it defames or harms a person's reputation, for example, then there can be a problem. But not an insurmountable problem.

"If it's 'based on a true story,' you are often representing real people and therefore clearances may be required," said Christos Michaels, a partner at the media law firm Lee & Thompson LLP, adding, "There are different laws in different countries about this."

That, backed up by a particular type of insurance covering "errors and omissions," means you can inject quite a bit of fiction into your truth.

Much of this, of course, stems from the vague phrase "based on," and it gets more vague from there. Consider "inspired by" — using it means your story doesn't need any direct connection to the truth.

"If a film is 'inspired by a true story,' then it tends to be the case that it's just a concept for the idea rather than a factual account," Michaels said. "In terms of characters, such a film would generally not try and portray anyone from the real story."

The most famous case of this, perhaps, is the 1973 horror classic "The Exorcist," which proclaims to be "inspired by" true events. In this case, that means the author (it was a book first) saw a newspaper article about an exorcism, and it "inspired" him to write a movie about an exorcism.

Q: I loved the movie "Blood In, Blood Out" — it was my favorite of the '90s teen gang movies. But was that Benjamin Bratt in the starring role? I didn't think he was around yet.

A: Benjamin Bratt didn't really become a star until he premiered in "Law & Order" in 1995, but he was already showing a good deal of promise, particularly in "Blood In, Blood Out" two years earlier.

That film addressed the issue of street gangs in Los Angeles and was, as you point out, part of a brief cinematic trend that included other excellent films such as "Boyz n the Hood" (1991) and "Menace II Society" (1993). Bratt starred as one of three family members all embroiled, in one way or another, in East L.A. gang life.

It was certainly a breakout role for him, but he was already on producers' radars. In fact, he'd already starred in two TV shows — "Nasty Boys" and "Knightwatch" — but neither made it past its first season.

James Cameron hosts "James Cameron's Story of Science Fiction"

Superior Donuts

27 12 9:00 PM

Arthur (Judd Hirsch), Franco (Jermaine Fowler) and Sofia (Diane Guerrero) are all driven to make life-altering decisions that will shape their futures in this season finale when an armed robbery at the doughnut shop shakes all three to their cores.

The Terror

AMC 9:00 PM

The men must decide what they're willing to do to survive in this new episode. As it turns out, hope comes in strange forms. Jared Harris and Ciarán Hinds star in this period drama about explorers seeking the Northwest Passage.

Elementary

27 12 10:00 PM

When a victim is killed during a Revolutionary War re-enactment, Holmes (Jonny Lee Miller) and Watson (Lucy Liu) investigate in this new episode. As they learn about the world of rare antiquities, Holmes finds solace in Michael (Desmond Harrington).

James Cameron's Story of Science Fiction

AMC 10:20 PM

James Cameron explores why audiences enjoy being scared so much as he shines a spotlight on movie monsters in this new episode. Directors Guillermo del Toro and Ridley Scott weigh in with their thoughts, as does actress Milla Jovovich.
